

BETTY VINCENT'S ADVICE to LOVERS

THE CHARM OF INNOCENCE.

THE charm of the innocent is great, if she would but know it while she is one and not keep trying to appear a sophisticated something else. Why must things do it? Why must the sweet, refreshingly new little things try to appear ancient and worldly and know it all? That is a question that I have often asked myself, and I can never see the answer.

People love to see a fresh, young creature, perfectly natural and unacquainted with the ugly sides of everything around, just as they love to see a beautiful flower or a rare work of art.

The reason we all like to see this so much is because it is rarer than any work of art and because it appeals to all of us so strongly.

Where the charm lies that can make the real, live innocent try to imitate the older woman who sees things as they are and would love to change place with her if the truth were known, is an unsolved problem. It exists, though, and flourishes like the bay tree.

How often do you see an unspoiled little girl of eighteen who is willing to act like herself and not try to imitate some one she has seen somewhere and longs to be like? Some actress, generally, or young society matron who works as hard landing society as a convict does breaking stones.

The innocent little heart, long for traits not half as attractive as what she possesses, if she will leave herself alone, and goes on bawling and imitating until she loses the highest cards in her hand and becomes just like everybody else.

Why does she do it?

All perplexed young people can obtain expert advice on their tangled love affairs by writing to Betty Vincent. Letters for her should be addressed to BETTY VINCENT, Evening World, Post-Office Box 151, New York.

Promised Him a Kiss.

Dear Betty: FRIEND of mine is much taken up with smoking. As I am opposed to smoking, I said one day in fun that if he would reform and stop smoking I would reward him with a kiss. I did not think that he would take it in earnest, but he did, and stopped smoking for the sake of the reward. Do you think it proper that I should give it to him? UNDECIDED. You should not have said that if you did not mean it. Always keep your word, but do not make foolish promises.

Has No Friend.

Dear Betty: FOR six weeks I have been living in this city. When I was at home I loved a girl who dearly loved me, but on account of my coming to New York we had to part. Can you advise me how I can get acquainted with some girl whom I may take an interest in? I feel unhappy, for I have no friend, either male or female. H. W. Why don't you go to the country to see the girl that you say you love dearly? Write to her. There is no way to meet new people unless you do.

He Is Married.

Dear Betty: A FEW weeks ago a lady introduced me to a gentleman to whom I took quite a liking. After going out with him several times he told me he had been married for five years. I almost dropped when he told me this, but he claims to think a great deal of me. He has called at my home and has met my parents. He wants me to continue the friendship. Advise me. A. L. S.

You should have nothing more to do with him. It can do no good and you are placing yourself in a position to be very much molested when you receive his attentions.

She Deceived Him.

Dear Betty: I LOVE a girl very much and she tells me that she loves me. One night I took her out walking and, as usual, I wanted to leave her at her home. But this night she did not want me to come to the door with her and I did not, but watched and found there was another young man waiting for her at the door. He talked to her quite a while and kissed her good night. I told her about it next day and she denied the kiss affair or that she intended to meet him. Do you think she would make a good wife? CONSTANT. She would not make a good wife, because in the first place she is not even truthful. Leave her alone.

Summer Playlets—No. V. THE GODDESS OF THE SCRUBBING PAIL.

By Nixola Greeley-Smith.

The deck of an ocean liner entering New York Bay. Among the first-cabin passengers a general air of cheerful expectancy and relief due to the realization that there will be no more shuffleboard, no more Sunday concerts, no more food that looks and tastes all right, but you have your doubts. The Americans look patriotically toward the Statue of Liberty, but the Earl of Marshbanks and his American bride arriving on their annual visit to "popper" stand aloof on the deck's rear, taking a final and privileged view of the scurrying steerage passengers below.

THE Countess (surveying a tall and beautifully made girl of the poorest peasant class who stands apart from her fellow-passengers—Betty, isn't she? What a pity! The Earl (angrily)—Betty, what? The Countess—I said that blond girl in the steerage is very pretty, and that it's too bad. No doubt she thinks she's coming in the Promised Land—look at the light in her eyes!—and she'll wake up to the same delusion she left behind her. The Earl—Will she now? The Countess (impatiently)—Of course. She'll land with vague ideas of being a princess, and she'll cook or scrub all her life just as if she had never left—I fancy it was Norway or Denmark. The Earl—Oh, come now, Flossie; didn't you tell me your great-grandmother came over in the first? The Countess (tying him with marmalade and determined by her great-grandmother came over in the Mayflower, Algonquin).

The Earl—Ah, yes! Old Countess, wasn't it? The Countess (impatiently)—I wish you wouldn't be such a fool! Come on! SCENE II.—Two years later. The Diana of the steerage discovered at 6 o'clock in the morning scrubbing the steps of an old-fashioned mansion on Beacon street, Boston. On the opposite side of the street the Theatrical Manager and the Leading Man.

Theatrical Manager—I tell you, we've got the bummiest lot of girls in this show I ever saw. Why don't you get them, anyhow? The Leading Man—Don't know. They're rotten. They're washwomen. There's a girl scrubbing those steps now that's got 'em all skinned to death.

The Manager (watching the girl and the scrubbing process with kindling eye)—By George! so she has. Look at that arm. I wonder how a scrubbing act would take in the new place? Do you think New York would stand for it? But there wouldn't be a chance for clothes. I'd like to see that woman dressed up. Looks like a typical New York girl, doesn't she? I believe she'd make a hit.

SCENE III.—A newspaper office. First Slave of the Quill (writing)—The hit of the place is undoubtedly Miss Zara Clinton, the society beauty that Manager Blackinton discovered in Beacon street, Boston, some months ago and persuaded to leave the ballroom for the footlights. Her success as the New York girl was instantaneous. Her marvelous beauty, aristocratic bearing—

Second Slave of the Quill—How's the new girl in "The King of Wertheim," Bill? First Slave (pausing in his tale of the lady's triumph a minute)—Oh, she's a great big fat-footed blond slab. Blackinton's going to take her to London, they say.

SCENE IV.—Town house of the Earl and Countess of Marshbanks. The Earl (reading the morning paper)—I see Albatross is going to marry the new American beauty, Zara Clinton. Bad business, isn't it? The Countess—What is the peerage coming to? He'll almost certainly succeed to the dukedom, won't he?

The Earl—Oh, yes; he's next in line. Dooed fine girl, anyhow. The Countess (with venom)—She's a cook! Why, she landed in America five years ago in the steerage.

The Earl (laboriously adjusting his monocle and picking up the paper)—Oh, no. It says here her ancestors went over in the Mayflower. The Countess (again impatiently)—"It says"—Oh, I wish you wouldn't be such a fool, Algonquin!

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer.

Falling Hair.

M. S.—It is quite common for the hair to fall after illness, particularly when the system has been prostrated. Try the tonic I give you; rubbing it in gently every night. Phenol acid, 1 gram; tincture of nux vomica, 71-3 grains; tincture of red ammonia, 1 gram; tincture of cantharides, 1 gram.

Scant Eyebrows. V. S.—This is the ointment for scant eyebrows. Red vaseline, two ounces; tincture of cantharides, one-eighth ounce; oil of lavender, fifteen drops; oil of rosemary, fifteen drops. Mix thoroughly. Apply to the eyebrows with a tiny toothpick once a day until the growth is sufficiently stimulated. Then less often. This ointment may be used for the eyelashes also. In this case it should be very carefully applied. It will enhance the eye, and any oil will get into them.

NEW CURVES AND ANGLES AT THE SEASHORE.

By Maurice Ketten.

Clever Things I Never Said.

By Lowe R. Case.

I WAS SITTING in an exclusive session of John D. It's a Sunday school class, listening to a thrilling discourse of his on the Tower of Babel. "Innumerable people were gathered there," he said, "and all sorts and conditions, and all chattered away regardless of the others, and quarrelled and disagreed and shouted and wrangled, and were at cross-purposes and hated each other, and." "Why, Jack!" I broke in playfully, "I didn't know summer hotel verandas were invented in those days!" "See!" shrieked my friend, the Chief Muck-Raker. "The pork-packers live in luxury and comfort immunity, while veterans of the war are forced to demand pensions in order to keep alive! All of which proves—" "That the pen is mightier than the sword," I blurted in, with a roar of infectious laughter at my own ready (made) wit. My friend, the veteran runner-up in the Presidential Sweepstakes, Bill J. Bryan, was telling me with great gusto of his trip through Japan, and the strange, un-Nebraska-like customs he had observed while studying the Little Brown Brother at home. "I heard of one case, up country," he prattled on, "where a man bought a wife for two dollars and a plated silver photograph frame. Isn't that outrageous?" "Why, no, Bill," I replied, with my inimitable dry humor, "not necessarily. A good wife is well worth that much."

HAPPY DREAMS.

By F. G. Long.

HINTS FOR THE SUMMER SEASON.

By Roy L. McCardell.

Suggestions for Work and Play for Camping-Out-Parties.

THIS is now the height of the vacation season. Most every one we know is being presented with two weeks or more off by considerate employers. Some get two weeks, some two months and some who have shown themselves so temperamentally incapable of constant endeavor that the boss notices it have been given definite and permanent relief from the exactions of wage-slavery.

To those of limited means (people with money need not be advised) there is no summer joyance as cheap, healthful and as easy to obtain as the pleasures of gipsying. As the song says: "When You Leave Old New York Town You're Only Camping Out!" And so you are, especially if you have a tenting out.

A good tent costs about forty dollars. Forty dollars is a lot of money unless you say it quickly, and for persons of limited means it is an investment that is a dead loss between times. Now it stands to reason, too, that anybody possessing forty red dollars isn't going to camp out, hence the home-made tent must be made at home and as economically as possible.

Canvas makes the best tents, mosquito netting not having sufficient rain-proof qualities.

Secure from the Bureau of Elections as much material as you need. All election returns are canvassed over several times, and as only the returns are of any value to the Board of Elections, a little influence exerted in the right quarter will enable you to get all the canvasses of election you may need.

Whether you intend to pitch your camp on the seashore or in the woods a good gas stove is necessary. Other necessities of camping out include a phonograph, a rocking chair, a cigar-band collection, and, if you are going after big game, a pack of cards and five hundred poker chips.

The phonograph will be found indispensable when camping in the woods. First, its welcome voice will always enable you to find your way back to camp should you wander far into the forest to kill a few backwoods snakes for breakfast. Take some fresh records with you for the pleasure and profit of catching new-laid coon songs. Whenever you hear the coons singing, start the phonograph. In this manner you may return with enough new coon songs to pay the cost of your trip, which, if you have not been too extravagant, will not cost you anything.

But do not tire yourself out sitting in the rocking chair and listening to the phonograph. Getting back to nature tries if one is too strenuous. Lawn tennis is splendid recreation for a camping-out party. Care should be exercised not to indulge in it to excess. If you become overheated and tired retire into the tent and take a genuine Turkish bath.

This consists of looking intently at a cup of water for ten minutes while stroking a feather pillow. The rub-down is especially soothing. A cheap lawn tennis outfit can be made of an old lace curtain. The camp frying pans will do for sautees and biscuits left over from breakfast will serve splendidly for balls.

Lawn tennis, as its name implies, is played on a lawn. Bring the old lawn from home with you or borrow one from a friend. A dainty dish for campers-out is pickled muscles.

Here is the recipe for pickled muscles: If your arms and shoulders get sunburned rub three times a day with vinegar.

Tabby Talks.

By Alice Rohe.

"GOOD MORNING, DEAR!" Oh, do let me fix the end of your switch! You ought to be more careful when you try to get that Botticelli effect. That's one thing I never could understand, how you could wear anything so shabby. Thank goodness my wealth of hair saves me from resorting to such artifices. I never do anything to my hair but just brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look quite well. I heard Mrs. Brown Jones say if you only would tidy yourself up a little you would be quite attractive. Do you know, Charlie insisted you were looking up your hair. He said the last time he saw you it looked three shades lighter than usual, never brush it up in the morning. "That's quite apparent, dear. You should have heard what Charles de Hagley said about your hair, dear. No, it was too mean to repeat! But honestly, sweetheart, if you would give some attention to your hair it would look